

Darryl Jordan

Darryl Jordan was born in Parma, Ohio. He was raised in the city of Lakewood and obtained a Bachelor of Science degree in Nursing from Ohio Wesleyan University in Delaware, Ohio.

He has held staff and management positions in Nursing in the areas of medical surgical, critical care and emergency services, obtaining the associated national certifications associated with each specialty. He also worked as both a flight nurse for a private air ambulance fixed wing service and The Ohio State University Hospitals rotor wing program SKYMED.

In 1988, Darryl moved to Palm Springs, Cal., to start a trauma program for Desert Regional Medical Center, and developed a self-insured and administered program for the organization's Professional, General and Worker's Compensation programs. While in California, Darryl obtained a Master of Science Degree and a Certificate in Quality from California State University. He also became nationally certified in Risk, Quality and Administration.

Subsequent to leaving California, Darryl has held administrative positions in Risk and Operations overseeing insurance, clinical and environmental risk, safety, quality, accreditation, case management, medical staff affairs, health information, pharmacy and security for Adventist Health System West and the Healthcare Corporation of America (HCA). He moved to Texas while working for HCA.

In 2003, Darryl became the Vice President of Risk Management and Chief Risk Officer for Seton Healthcare Network in Austin.
